George Anderson Leaves To Manage Store At Hanna

George Anderson, well known store manager at the Western Department Store for many years past, is leaving Strathmore after living here almost thirty-eight years. Mr. Anderson will take over the Hanna Co-operative Stores the first of the week, and will be manager of all their branches, including a grocery, hardware, lumber and harness shop, cold storage locker and cattle pool.

"George", as he is known to everyone, came to Strathmore with his parents, as a young man, in 1910, and worked at various times for the C. P. R., the John Deere and Hart Parr firms, the Fox Department Store, A. D. Shrimpton, and latterly for S. Libin until the Western Department was taken over by Mr. Harry Brown, a few months ago.

During these years, Mr. Anderson has been an active member of the community, serving many terms on the Curling Club, the School Board, the Board of Session of the United Church, and acting for years on the fire department, of which he is now deputy chief. In addition, Mr. Anderson has belonged to many of the fraternal organizations in town. He held nearly every office in the old Oddfellow's Lodge, and was only recently elected president of the Lion's Club for this year.

Mrs. Anderson and their family will continue to reside in Strathmore until George has found suitable accomodation for them in Hanna.

Weddings

HAMILTON — STOODLEY

The Grace Presbyterian Church was the setting for a very pretty wedding last Saturday, August 7th when Myrtle May, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Stoodley of Nightingale became the bride of Norman A. Hamilton of Calgary. Rev. J. H. Gardner of Mount Royal College officiated. Promptly at two o'clock the bride proceeded down the aisle on the arm of her father. She looked very charming in a floor length lace trimmed white satin gown with long lily point sleeves. Her veil that fell in a long train was caught in a coronet. She carried a bouquet of American beauty roses. Mrs. Eddie Risdon, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a floor length gown of jonquil yellow and carried mauve sweet peas. Miss Helen Hamilton sister of the groom, was bride's maid and wore a pale blue satin gown and carried blue sweet peas. The best man was Mr. Ross Crighton and the bride's twin brothers, Tom and Ted, were ushers. For the occasion the bride's mother chose a gown of turquoise with hat to match. Her corsage was of pink rose buds. The groom's mother wore a dress of printed light beige. Her corsage was of rose buds and sweet peas. During the signing of the register, Mrs. Ethel Yerex impressively sang "Through The Years".

Following the ceremony, about seventy five guests gathered at the Harris Sky Room where a reception was held. The bride and groom with their parents received the guests. A three tiered cake centered a prettily decorated table. Dr. A. A. Downey proposed the toast to the bride and the groom made the response. For going away, the bride wore a steele blue tallored suit and matching topcoat with white accessories. The happy pair left for a honeymoon in Edmonton where they will make their home while Norman continues his work at the University.

Wedding

WAY—MORGAN

A wedding which united two pioneer families of Strathmore and Nightingale was solemnized in Central United Church Friday, August 6, when Ralph, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Way and Delores Virginia, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Morgan were united in marriage, the Rev. Gordon Lapp officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a very becoming blue grey suit, with black hat and black accessories. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty Roses. Kathleen Joel was bridesmaid for her cousin. She chose a street length dress of pink and her bouquet was carnations and sweet peas. Lawrence Way was best man for his brother.

Following the ceremony a delicious Wedding Supper was served in the York Hotel for immediate families only, sixteen guests being present. The young couple left late for a honeymoon at Sylvan Lake, and on their return will reside in Calgary. For the past 18 months the bride was linotype operator in The Standard Office and all members of the Staff wish for her and her husband a very happy future.

FARM IMPROVEMENT LOANS

Figures for the half year ending in June have been released by the administration of the Farm Improvement Loans Act, showing an increase in volume of thirty-five percent over the business done last year.

It is interesting to note that Alberta still heads the list in provinces taking advantage of the Act, both in the amount borrowed and in the number of borrowers, though, as before, Saskatchewan still runs a very close second.

Loans for the purchase of farm implements and trucks still represents the largest volume of money borrowed, though loans for building and rural electrification have increased materially in the past six months.

It is interesting also to note, that though these loans are guaranteed in part by the Dominion Government against loss, there have never been any claims for loss since the Act came into force.

DOWN AT THE POOL

Considerble criticism has been offered over the swimming pool, and the great lack of patronage, and we have not been slowest to deplore the situation. But we feel that criticism offered last Tuesday at the council meeting was unfounded when it was suggested that only half a dozen children use the pool regularly.

Our personal observation has been that many more than that use the pool consistently. Further, we know some children are there three times a day,... each time the pool is open. And when one councillor doubted if any adults, "say, over eighteen," use the pool, we counted quickly five friends in the over eighteen group who frequently visit the pool.

Counting quickly again, we remembered at least three near drownings in the Strathmore area in the past few years, and there have probably been some we weren't familiar with. We know one young man who is wearing a wrist watch presented him by a parent whose child he fished out.

And looking broadly at the picture, we feel that it's not out of the way to pay, and continue to pay, to keep the pool open. It provides more safety, and more peace of mind for parents, than the ditch, where children splash about unwatched, often unaccompanied, and often untaught, and eliminates entirely the stupid old idea of being taught to swim by being chucked off a raft. There are fifty kids using the pool—surely to goodness two hundred and fifty dollars or so for safety for that number isn't out of the way.

Let The Fon Have Fun

(From Saturday Night)

Is not the United Nations possibly biting off more than it has a right to chew, when it decides that it is improper for the Fon of Bikon, in the British Cameroons, to have one hundred and twenty wives? Freedom of religion is one of the basic principles of the Charter, and a United Nations which includes half-a-dozen Mohammedan states cannot possibly set up monogamy as a condition of membership.

We doubt not that the people of Bikon have a deep-rooted religious belief that it is the duty of their ruler to have as many wives as the condition of the exchequer will allow him to maintain, and that it would be highly un-Bikoming in him not to do so. He may indeed determine by his own authority what his religion requires of him in this matter—a situation for which there is good precedent in the case of Henry VIII and other princes. Or the climatic, military, social or demographic conditions of Bikom (about which we are very obscure) may make such an arrangement necessary for the safety or peace of the state. There may be an enormous surplus of females in Bikon whom nobody except the Fon can afford to marry.

We are not prepared to have any Canadian troops used in the disestablishment of the Bikon harem. And we are worried lest an international organization which concerns itself about one ruler having too many wives might get to concerning itself about other rulers who have too few. The Fon of Canada has no wives at all; but it is by his own choice and his own sense of duty that he is in that condition, just as it is by the choice and sense of duty of the Fon of Bikom that he is in his very different one. First thing you know the United Nations will be objecting to bachelor prime ministers.

What No Santa Claus?

From Thursday to Thursday always seems like a nice long time to get a paper out, that is, on Thursday after the paper has been dispatched to the post office. By Friday afternoon time has telescoped a little, by Monday it seems as if the following Thursday is breathing right down our necks. Brooding over this one Wednesday not so long ago made us ask a man of the ripe old age of fifty if he found time went very quickly. He was most emphatic about the speeding up of time.

"Ever since I found out that there wasn't any Santa Claus, time or life seems to move very rapidly," he said and added wistfully, "Before that it seemed an awfully long time between Christmases."

That discovery made him grow up suddenly and to grown-ups time is a sixteen cylinder, custom built, speed-geared job. It's the disillusionment that does the trick. No Santa Claus. However, it's a good thing that most people grow up. The pleasant state of innocence of childhood when Santa Claus or parents arranged for everything from toy trains to shoes and ice-cream cones, can't satisfactorily last a lifetime.

Hot, Luke Warm, And Stone Cold

A candidate in the forthcoming provincial election recently told us that at the time of his nomination he was rather reluctant to stand for election but there was considerable pressure put upon him by enthusiastic delegates who promised all-out support. They were quite positive that his election would do a great deal to set things right in the world and to clear away everything that is wrong. That same man is sadder and wiser now. It's one thing, he finds, now that he wants some work done, to listen to people rant and rave about what is wrong and it's quite another to get support in doing anything about it.

People who get very hot about what is wrong, are mostly lukewarm about doing anything like constructive thinking, and stone cold when it comes to any real work.

Irrigation

Judging from recent newspaper stories the business of making rain through "dry-ice" and other mechnical means has advanced beyond the stage where normal humans can refer to it as a "crack-pot's dream". Recently the Defence Research Bureau announced that by slipping a couple of pounds of "dry ice" into a cloud formation at 18,000 feet they had reaped approximately a 20 minute light rainfall.

We do not like to feel that we are old-fashioned but we still maintain that a better investment against draught in this country is more and greater irrigation projects. Naturally, we cannot begrudge the boys a few thousands here and there to experiment with rain-making gadgets, but in case any of the Ottawa brass-hats might be listening we feel that "Irrigation is a sounder project".

The authorities at Ottawa, too, should realize that every dollar spent on irrigation is one hundred cents invested against floods, which during the past year have caused damage in the millions to Western Canada.

Money spent on irrigation, even to our mind which is not considered analytical, is the soundest possible investment that any government could make in agricultural Canada. A comparison of present farming practises with those which would be opened through irrigation is a view of the subject capable of telling the whole story in the fewest possible words. Drumheller Mail.

Horse And Buggy Days

Alberta was plagued, in the pioneer years, with horse and cattle thieves. It was a serious matter in those times for a homesteader to be deprived of his horses, for those animals provided him with draught power and transportation. Cattle rustlers were a menace to the ranching industry, too, and their thefts were becoming increasingly bold.

Arthur Sifton was chief justice of the province at the time and he took effective measures to stop livestock stealing. Those guilty of such thefts, who were unfortunate enough to appear before Judge Sifton usually got a penitentiary term of around five years. That method proved effective.

The judiciary, for better or worse, have a habit of following precedent. The other day we noticed that a man had been given a four year jail term for stealing a horse. Now horses are not the main source of draft power on farm today nor are they so necessary in providing transportation. Furthermore it is seldom that one hears of horse stealing. The motor car and the truck are almost indispensable to agriculture, but who ever hears of a car thief getting a three year jail term? It looks as though the judiciary is still living in the horse and buggy days. Brooks Bulletin

M. Hanson Suffers Farm Accident

What might have proved a very serious accident was averted by quick thought and action on the part of Myron Hansen when driving a combine last Thursday. A jeep was attached to the combine. Myron became caught in the trappings of the combine, and by quick thought and action he cut the wires thereby loosing himself from what otherwise might have had very serious results He drove the jeep home, while suffering from a badly wounded leg, which on examination was found to be broken in three places. Myron is now in the Holy Cross Hospital, and making as good a recovery as possible.

Langdon Notes

by G. E. W.

The Women's Institute held their regular meeting last Wednesday afternoon, 13 members present. The sum of $10.00 will be sent towards the Cancer fund. A box of soap was sent overseas. A very interesting and grateful letter of thanks was read from a member of an institute overseas for parcels received. A tasty lunch was served by Mrs. Page and Mrs. Colwell.

A capacity crowd filled the Baptist Church on Sunday evening to hear the Staff of the Sun Rise Gospel Hour from Calgary. Many old favorite hymns were sung. Rev. R. Simpson conducted the service.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Bittle have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. O. Borgstrom and baby son of Ferintosh, Alberta.

The steam shovel is working at top speed these days, getting the basement dug out, for the additional new school that is to be built on to the present Kent School. There is lots to be done before school starts next month.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, The Standard:

The following letter may be of interest to those, who like Mrs. T. Burdett, President of the Hussar Ladies Aid, have sent quilts over to England as early as 1941, and wondered if they were doing any one any good.

33 Greenwood Avenue,
Wymering, Portsmouth,
Hants, England.
July 8th, 1948.

Dear Mrs. Burdett:—

You will wonder who I am, and be surprised to receive a letter from England, but let me explain, I am an invalid, confined to bed—not having walked for 23 years. I was taken ill at 17 years old, with rheumatism. Well, I lived in hospital for years, and am now out, and living in a room and with very kind people—who own this house. I badly needed bedding etc., and asked the local W. V. S. for assistance—and in the parcel of blankets I found a very pretty patchwork quilt, with your name and address in the corner. So I felt that I just must write to you—else why did I find the address? I hope you won't think I am taking a very great liberty, but I just wanted to thank you, and to say how lovely the quilt is and how gay for an invalid! Just the thing to keep me cheerful. I expect that cover was sent a long time ago—during the war, perhaps? Anyway, it has found a very welcome place in my room, and in my heart, and I do thank you very, very much. As I write this I am wondering what you are like, and if you are a young person—but my idea is this—you are a mother, and have grey hair, but you are very, very kind—am I right? Once when I was very small I lived in B. C., so I feel sort of attached to Canada, and I have some very nice pen friends in California—so feel as if I know you. Please accept my deepest thanks—and if you ever have a spare minute, please will you write? I love to receive letters; they seem to be the greatest joy when one is confined to four walls all the time. Thank you, once again for the colorful and cheery quilt. All best wishes—

Yours sincerely,
Irene Gothercole.

Farmer's Column

R. J. Milligan, District Agriculturist

Considerable care will be necessary for our poultry this year. Many farmers and chicken raisers were unable to get their early hatched chickens. This will necessitate two or three things.

First, if your old hens are to be kept up, they should be culled very carefully, and all poor producers marketed. Secondly, the chicks that are being raised should get special care because there will be a problem of production of eggs as was never experienced before. For the above reasons, I am making a few suggestions to improve the farm flock. It is also realized that the farm women do most of the poultry work. The suggestions I have to offer will make her work easier, but will require the cooperation of her husband to make use of them. The canning season will soon be here, and the house wife's attention should not be entirely tied up with the poultry flock.

Last week, I was discussing some of these points with a ladie's organization, and quoted 1½ square feet floor space per bird. This was incorrect, and should have been 2½ square feet per bird. Exceptionally large birds should have 4 feet.

Birds should be trough fed, and hens that are producing eggs should be fed within an enclosure. They should not be allowed to run at large on farm lots or on the farm. Eating of grasshoppers and maggots found in manure piles will flavour the eggs and give them a strong odor. Eating green grass and clover will give the yolks a dark yellow color. Some house wives object to this. Care should be taken with the poultry flocks because the ultimate consumers are the ones who should be considered in producing anything on the farm.

If the birds have to scratch through heavy litter for their feed, they expend energy which, if conserved, can be used for their development and growth. The object with your young birds this year is to get large healthy and vigorous chicks, and high egg production can be expected if they are properly fed. Young birds should be pastured within an enclosure. Early spring birds should be pastured on Crested Wheat Grass to start with as it comes very early in the spring, and as the grass gets taller they can be changed over to an enclosed pasture planted to clover or Rape seed.

Oats are a very good growing feed, and should be trough fed at all times. Try to obtain oats with very little hull, as the birds do not make much use of the hulls. The growing mash should be fed in a trough also, and it has been recommended that mashes be fed in the morning. If you have a laying flock, the laying mash should be used in addition to the oats. Whole wheat should be fed to your laying flock at night. This gives the chickens some body of material to digest during the night.

The trough should be cleaned after each feeding, and any trash or surplus should be fed to the pigs. Another very important point to remember is that clean water must be kept in front of the birds at all times. If the feed trough and water fountain are close to the fence, you will not have to disturb the birds during feeding time. This will speed up your work. Move your water fountain and your troughs from time to time to prevent accumulation of dirt.

Growing birds require some oyster shells. The calcium in the oyster shells help in the development of their bones. Laying birds should have oyster she'ls at all times. Growing or laying birds that are confined should be self-fed grit in a small hopper. If these are built with a lid, they can be filled without disturbing the flock too much. A point to remember is that grain feeding maintains the bird's body weight, and the mash feeding represents growth in the chicks and eggs in the mature flock.

The houses should be kept clean at all times, and correct dropping boards provided for the birds. A wire netting should be attached to the bottom side of the roosts to keep the chickens from jumping down from the roosts on to the dropping boards. The roosts should be level to keep the birds from climbing to the higher rung. Plenty of roosting space should be provided because crowding of the birds is conducive to the development of crooked breasts. A suggestion was offered that the roosts be hinged to the back of the wall and so when you clean your drop boards, the roosts can be propped up out of your way.

The brooder house and hen house windows should be opened to allow a free circulation of air during the summer months. If the windows are hinged at the top, they can be hung up out of the way and if you find it necessary, they can be screened to prevent birds from roosting on the window sill. These brooder houses should be moved from time to time to keep the ground under and around them clean. Another advantage to moving them often is that in this way, attacks of disease can be more easily prevented.

Chickens and turkeys should not be run together. A series of pastures should be provided; that is, birds should not be run on the same land year after year. New pasture should be provided each spring. The old pastures can be plowed up and summer fallowed. It might be wise to provide a movable fence to permit easy handling of equipment on the pastures. This discussion will be continued next week.

HAY IN THE STACK—MILK IN THE PAIL—

"Canada urgently requires increased milk production to meet domestic requirements and fulfill contracts with Great Britain", states D. H. McCallum, Dairy Commissioner, Alberta Department of Agriculture.

"Prices for milk and butterfat promise to be quite attractive this coming winter. If milk production is to be kept to a maximum, it is essential that every forkful of hay and roughage be stacked now. Indications are that hay will be exceedingly scarce this winter. Avoid disappointment by harvesting all available feed at this time."

A bookmaker, who was ill, sent his small son for the family doctor, but it was a strange physician who called. After the doctor had left, he asked his son for an explanation.

"Well, you see dad," said his son, "there were lots of brass plates on doors, and when I got to the number you gave me, I saw "Consultations 10 to 11,' but the chap next door was offering "Consultations 10 to 1," and I thought you'd like the one that gave the best odds."

Bob Milligan asked Charlie Taylor why he was late for Sunday school.

"I was gonna go fishing this morning," said Charlie, "But Daddy wouldn't let me."

"You're a very fortunate little boy to have a father like that," said Bob. "And did your father make it clear to you why you shouldn't go fishing on Sunday?"

"Oh, sure," replied Charlie. "He said there wasn't enough bait for both of us."

Bruce Potter: Mum, are we made of dust?"
Mrs. Potter: "Yes, dear."
Bruce: And when we die, do we return to dust?
Mrs. Potter: "Yes, dear."
Bruce: "Well then, there's someone either coming or going, under my bed."

Roland Hanson: "Why don't you marry her?"
Keith Wheeler: "She has a slight impediment in her speech."
Roland: "How sad. What is it?"
Keith: She can't say 'yes.'"

Jimmy Gannon has arrived home late, and his wife was giving him a piece of her mind. "I don't care, my dear," said Jimmy, getting really worked up, "I mean exactly what I say I'm a man who calls a spade a spade."

Eva nodded. "Maybe, Jim," she said with biting sarcasm, "but you don't call a club a club. You call that working late at the office."

Dolly Saunders: What's that big thing?"

A class at school was asked to write four lines of dramatic poetry. Bruce Potter wrote

In the course of an English lesson, Mr. Crowther wrote on the blackboard: "He was bent on seeing his old school."

"Now, Richard," he said, "I want you to study that sentence and then say it to me in your own words."

After some thought, Richard said cheerfully: "The sight of his old school doubled him up."

Nightingale

by Mrs. F. H.

There was a very pleasant gathering of the ladies of this community at the hall last Wednesday. The event was a shower for Mrs. Henry Walls. The afternoon passed quickly in social conversation and a delicious tea was served with Mrs. Art Kimmett and Mrs. Pete McLean as hostesses. Immediately after tea a table was well filled with gifts such as are most useful in a home. Mrs. Kimmett asked Mrs. Walls to accept these with the hope that they would all be useful. It was an expression of sympathy for the Walls family in their recent loss. Mrs. Walls expressed her thanks and said she did appreciate the help of all their friends.

C. was the guest speaker for the afternoon. She chose for her address "Cleaning in the Home". There were a great many useful hints and some splendid recipes for home made cleaners. Then she stressed a few dont's that should be followed to avoid accidents. She received a hearty note of thanks. A dainty lunch was served to twelve members and two visitors.
